FOREWORD

After the tragic death of Alexander III in 1286 and Kinghorn's lack of defence against the invasion of Edward Baliol in 1332 on his way to be crowned the second Baliol King in Scotland, the burgh's importance might have been eliminated. David II, however, who was only five years old when his father, Robert the Bruce died, and only eight when Edward Baliol was crowned at Scone, determined to establish strong loyal families to protect Kinghorn and the road north. David installed his sister Margaret Bruce who was married to the Glen at Balmuto and gave them an interest in Glassmount and Piteadie where the Boswells, whose family connections included descent from the Thanes of Fife, previously held an interest. By marriage to the heiress of Glen, and the heiress of Jardyn's, who held the superiority of the Auld Kirk, the Boswells of Balmuto inherited all of these privileges and obligations and have pursued them zealously through the centuries. While in the past the Boswells of Balmuto felt that Kinghorn and its Kirk were worth fighting for with force of arms; now, and hopefully in the future, the Boswells of Balmuto hope to fight for the future of Kinghorn and its Kirk in co-operation with members of the parish with economic and cultural weapons. The Boswells are very pleased that the Minister, Kirk Session, Office-Bearers and Parishioners of Kinghorn Kirk continue interest in their historical heritage and congratulate the Committee for this excellent effort.

Balmuto, June 1979

Harry Boswell.

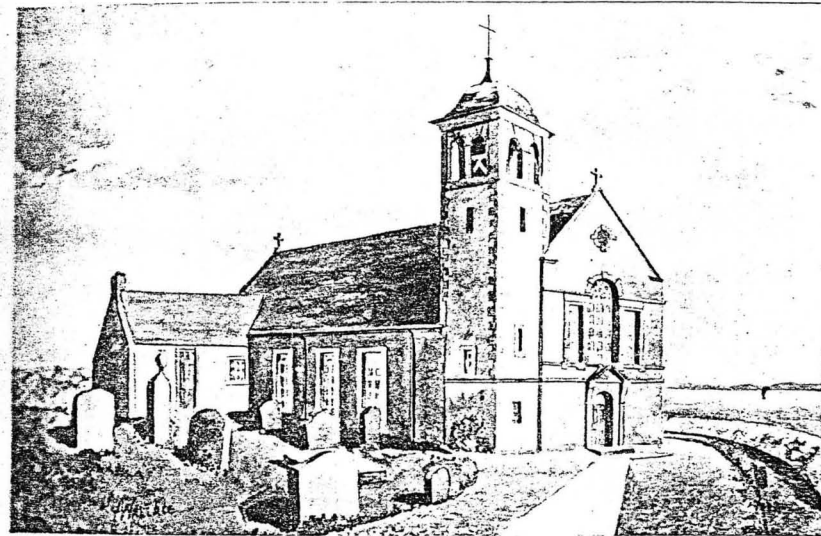

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Minister, Kirk Session, Board and Congregation of Kinghorn Parish Church express their debt of gratitude to the Boswell family for their financial gifts towards this publication and the future developments envisaged for this church.

We thank Mr Harry Boswell also for his foreword to this history.

We thank Alexander Cain, MA, PhD, of the National Library of Scotland, Edinburgh, for his research and compilation of a mass of fascinating material into this brief but interesting history.

EARLY HISTORY

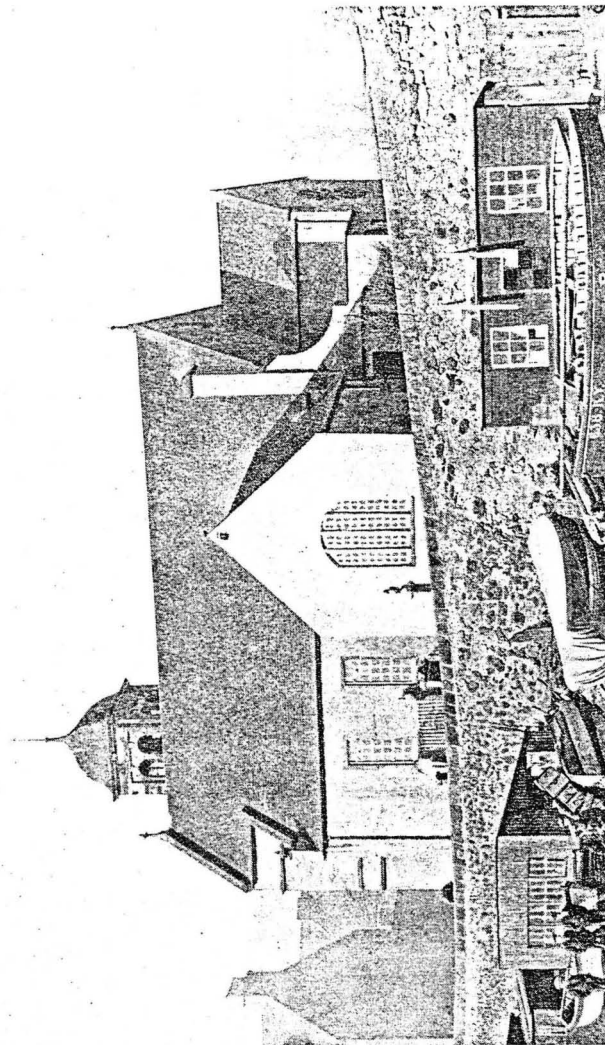

The early history of the parish of Kinghorn and its church is obscure. It is remarkably devoid of prehistoric finds or monuments, apart from the stone circle at Glassmount. However, Pictish place names like Pitkennie, Piteadie and Pettycur indicate settlement of an early date. There is other evidence to indicate that Kinghorn, not yet called by that name, was of importance in Pictish times: the existence of the 'shire' of Kinghorn demonstrates a Pictish administrative division. More importantly, however, the lost Ecclesmaline is significant in the early history of Christianity in the area. It has been identified with the site of the Bishop of St Andrews' 'palace' at Abden, already in ruins by 1484.

Eccles- names in this part of Scotland are rare, and are derived, not from the more common Gaelic eaglais but from the Pictish, and are of extremely early date. They confirm the tradition reported by Bede of the early Christianisation of South Pictland, possibly in the 5th century. It is well known that early Celtic churches were named after their founders, and Ecclesmaline indicates the presence of St Maline, an Irish missionary, in the area.

The name Abden – abthania – indicates lands belonging to an old Celtic monastery, and its later connection with the bishopric of St Andrews, well known as a religious settlement of Culdees, suggests the presence of Culdees in the area. St Serf, whose Culdee connections are known from St Serf's Island, in Loch Leven, was patron of Kinghorn parva, now Burntisland.

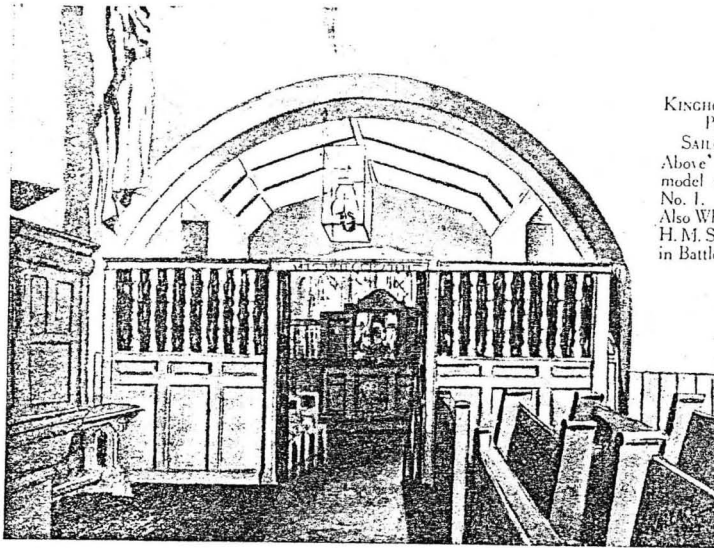

THE MIDDLE AGES

After the Dark Ages, Kinghorn emerges as an important royal centre, probably dating from the early kings of the Canmore dynasty. We first hear of it in 1128, when King David I, the first of the Anglo-Normanised kings, granted lands in Kinghorn to the Abbey of Dunfermline. There is a charter of his granted from Kinghorn, indicating a royal residence; and though Kinghorn was not yet a burgh, it points to the existence of a fairly flourishing coastal trade. King William the Lion dated a charter from Kinghorn in 1171. All traces of such a royal residence have been lost. Many writers have thought it was situated north of the present town, in the place commemorated by Glammis Tower field, but it is far more likely that Kinghorn Tower was located on the rocky plateau of the Ness, at the west end of modern Kinghorn, after which the town takes its name, Ceann gorn – 'the head of the sedges'. The importance of Kinghorn is shown by the fact that it formed part of the settlement on the wife of Alexander II in 1221.

Kinghorn has one great blaze of fame in Scottish history when, in 1286, King Alexander III was killed by a fall from his horse when riding from Dunfermline to his castle at Kinghorn to visit his young wife, Yolande, the result being the extinction of the old Celtic monarchy and the long wars with England.

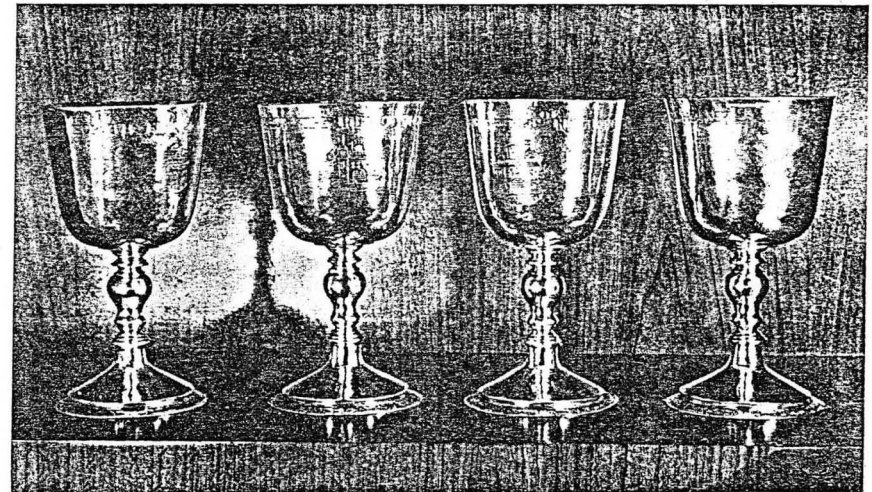

The mediaeval church, whose remains will be described below, is probably that dedicated by David de Bernham, Bishop of St Andrews, in 1243. References to it in the Middle Ages are few. In Bagmond's Roll, 1287, the important valuation document of the churches of Scotland for taxation purposes, the Ecclesia de Magna Kyrgorn (sic) is rated at 100 shillings. At this time there are references to Balred Bisset as Rector of Kinghorn, and the parish was known as a rich living in crown patronage. Baldred Bisset was an important figure during the Wars of Independence, and travelled to Rome to present the Scottish case to the Pope. He was deprived by the English King Edward I in favour of Peter of Dunwich.

By 1290, it appears that Kinghorn Church was an important religious centre. A letter from Pope Nicholas declares a relaxation of one year and forty days of enjoined penitence to those penitents who visit the Church of All Saints, Kinghorn, on the feasts of All Saints, the Assumption, and St Leonard, their octaves, and the anniversary of the dedication of the church. Kinghorn was involved in the many troubles of the English wars. In 1864, a hoard of coins was found not far from the church, probably buried by the clergy during Edward III's invasion in 1355.

THE REFORMATION

In 1559, John Wilson, vicar of Kinghorn and canon of Holyrood, renounced the Roman connection. His successor David Wood seems to have been of a fiery temperament, as in 1562 we find him charged before the superintendent and ministry at St Andrews with injuring and defaming John Brown, the reader in the parish, by calling him "a hypocrite and idolater, a mass-monger, and rascally knave".

The ministers of seventeenth century Kinghorn represent the shifting currents of Scottish religious life. John Scrimgeour, minister from 1606-20, was of the fiercely Presbyterian party who opposed James VI's episcopalian and liturgical schemes at the General Assemblies of Aberdeen in 1606 and Perth in 1617, for which opposition he was deprived in 1620. His successor, however, Alexander Scrymgeour (1629 to sometime between 1639 and 1641) was all in favour of the liturgical provisions of the Perth Assembly, such as kneeling at the Lord's Supper. He was followed by John Moncreiff, who accompanied the Scottish army during its invasion of England in the Civil War, and was present at Cromwell's victory at Marston Moor in 1644. Patrick Lyon, minister from 1686-1715, accepted the Presbyterian Settlement in 1689, but prayed for King James VIII in 1715, and after the failure of the '15 was forced to flee the parish. The last minister to be actively involved with church politics was Thomas Webster who in 1779 was forced to demit, having offended his parishioners by his lack of opposition to the Catholic Toleration Bill.

It is with the coming of the Reformation that Kinghorn Church is fully documented, thanks to a remarkably full set of Kirk Session records. A selection of the oldest has been published in "A selection of extracts from the ancient minutes of the Kirk Session of Kinghorn," Kirkealdy, 1863, and the records themselves are deposited in the Scottish Records Office. They give a rich picture of all aspects of Kinghorn civic and social life, indicating the important role played by the kirk in the administration of a town. It is well known that a kirk session was the guardian of parish morals, and the endless accounts of drunkenness, harlotry and Sabbath-breaking might justify the rhyme's description of

The first "Unicorn" of H.M. Navy. This famous model of H.M.S. Unicorn has been in the possession of Kinghorn Parish Church for over 300 years.

Kinghorn's inhabitants as 'graceless folk'. However, the minister and session did not have things all their own way. In 1607, people were reprimanded for leaving the church during sermon time, and answering the minister back, and in the following year, someone on being reproved by the session for playing golf on Sunday, answered "Fartis in your teithe and prayers bairne". This same minister seems not to have had full control over his parishioners, as a little later we hear of a woman who was "jesting at his posteriors".

The kirk worked closely in hand with the civil power, dealing with minor problems not of themselves religious, but relying on the authorities to enforce some of the punishments meted out. Thus, the session looked after financing poor relief and the giving of alms, and made efforts to control the influx of 'sturdy beggars', while major punishments like the 'jougs', imprisonment in the Tolbooth or banishment must have required the support of the magistrates. A common place of imprisonment appears to have been the steeple. There is only one example of the age's obsession with witchcraft; in 1644, Katherine Walenge was burned on a site which is now in the modern cemetery.

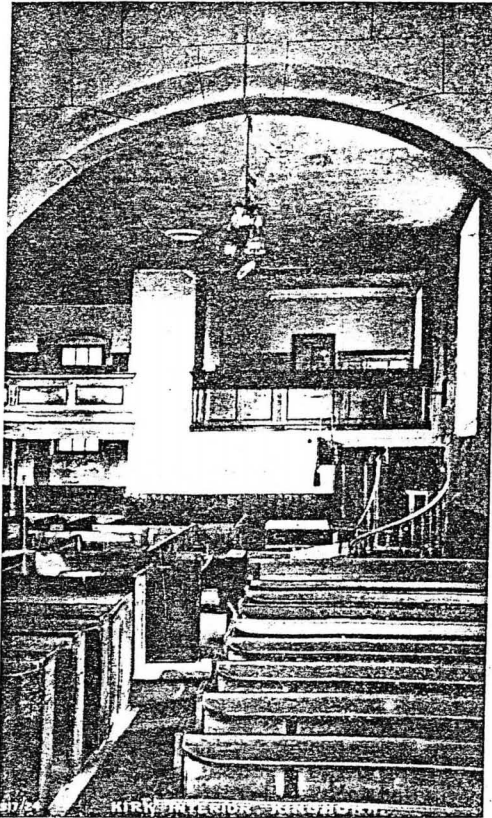

At the east of the present church are to be found ruins of an earlier building, probably that consecrated by the Bishop of St Andrews on May 17, 1243. There is not much that is recognisable: a rectangular east end, aisled on the south side, with traces of two windows on the north wall. Against the exterior of the gable, several portions of circular piers lie partially buried, 16 inches in diameter with moulded capitals, the remains of the aisle arcade.

It is possible that a representation of the church survives in the oldest example of the burgh seal. The modern coat of arms shows a castellated building; this would appear to be a deformation of a church with twin west towers, and a central crossing tower, implying a cruciform building, the transepts being currently represented by the Balmuto Aisle and the Sailor's Aisle. There is a west doorway surmounted by a tympanum, and flanked by two columns with capitals. No other illustration or description of the original church appears to have survived.

POST-REFORMATION PERIOD

The kirk session records of the immediate post-Reformation period describe various attempts at repairing and altering this structure. On June 26, 1608, the mariners, the most important Incorporation of the burgh, decided to repair the upper part of the South Aisle by building a loft. There is visible a stone at the apex of the exterior wall of the Sailors' Aisle, dated 1609, obviously commemorating this act.

A major rebuilding took place in 1774. The overall length was considerably reduced, the mediaeval chancel being sacrificed as a total ruin. The result is a plain preaching box, of elegant proportions, but with two wings at the east end (the old transepts, known curiously, as in other Scottish churches, as Kirk interior before the alterations, 1894. Looking from Sailors' Aisle towards Balmuto Loft occupied by the Boswells for many years and also known as the Laird's Loft.

'aisles'): to the south, the Sailors' Aisle, and to the north, the Balmuto Aisle, with the 'laird's loft' above and the crypt below. A finely cut inscription on the exterior wall commemorates the reconstruction of this transept by Claud Boswell of Balmuto, whose ancestral burial place it was. The wooden pannelling at present surrounding the organ pipes dates from an earlier period. The extent to which the church was rebuilt rather than remodelled is concealed by modern plastering. However, in a lawsuit between the heritors and the minister, the former claimed that it was essentially a new building, the cost of which they were not responsible for, while the minister insisted it was basically a restoration. It is certain that the walls up to the present window sills are of ancient origin. A

In 1937 the first stage of the interior renovation scheme was commenced (during the ministry of Rev. Charles McArthur). The organ was removed from chancel to the Balmuto Loft. The pulpit moved to the side position. In 1939 the new Elders' Stalls, were added and stained glass placed in the Rose window.

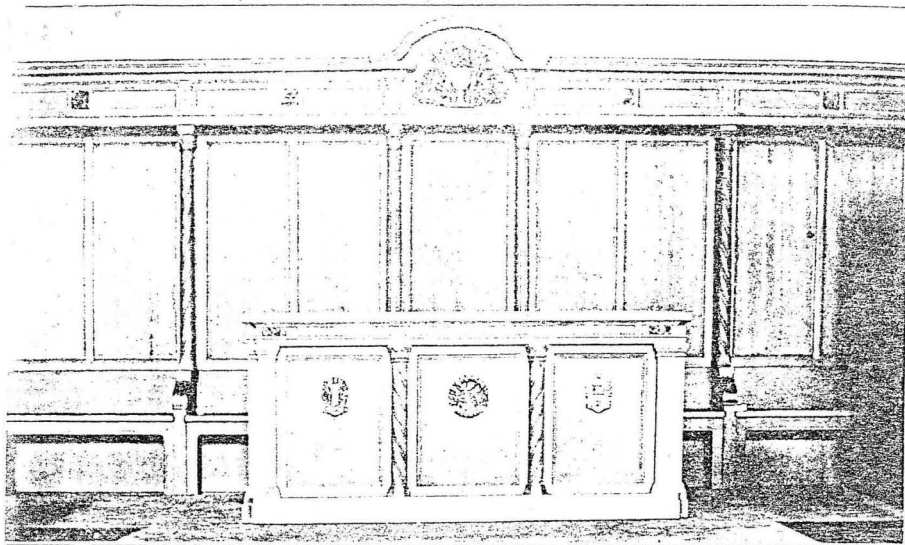

curious feature survives in the east wall of the Balmuto Aisle, a small ogee arch, the head of a feature variously described as a piscina or an aumbry. A further reconstruction took place in 1894, when the steeple and chancel were added.

The most interesting internal feature is the fine model of the ship, Unicorn, hanging in the Sailors' Aisle. Possibly constructed in 1567, it was refurbished in 1894. The incorporation of mariners not only used this aisle for their Sunday worship, but also for social or professional meetings on weekdays. From the windows they would be able to look over the Firth to the Leith Roads, and even when their minds were fixed on the pulpit, their eyes would not be unaware of their calling.

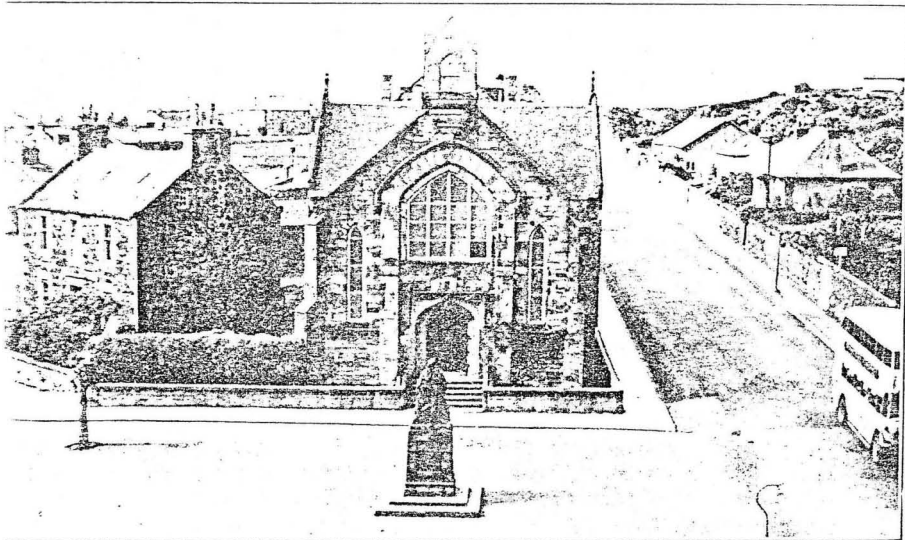

The pulpit is probably a reconstruction of the one installed in 1659.

In the graveyard which surrounds the church, some stones whose inscriptions have been recorded earlier have now sunk into the earth or have become illegible. Of the burial place of William Kirkaldy of Grange, "reburied in the ancient burial place of his predecessors in Kinghorn", there is no record. The stone commemorating Thomas Biggar, the minister who led Kinghorn through the momentous Reformation years, with its inscription, "I led you through forty years in the desert. I am entered into Jesus rest. Walk to it while ye may, and wish not out of time" - is no longer visible.

Formerly Rosslands Parish Church now Kinghorn Parish Church Hall. In 1778 came the first break from the Parish Church when a relief congregation was formed. Later it became the United Presbyterian Church and in 1900 the United Free Church. Then in 1929 on the Union of the Churches it became Rosslands Parish Church of Scotland. This picture shows the War Memorial before being altered for traffic purposes.

FUTURE

Throughout its long history Kinghorn Church has been altered, reconstructed in parts, had its name changed from All Saints to St Leonard's and generally been knocked about a bit. Still she stands at the edge of the sea a bastion against the changing tides of fashion and the movements of society which ebb and flow like the sea upon the sand beside her. The church building is just stone and mortar and only becomes a living church when people come in and make it more than an empty shell. As we move into the 80's this same old building has to be adapted to the times, as no fabric lasts forever. It is therefore hoped that by the 737th anniversary of its dedication on the 17th of May 1243 we shall have started on the rebuilding and replacing of the Organ in the West gallery. The reconstruction of the Laird's Loft into a congregational lounge and an area which can be used as a Creche. Allowing young couples to worship together as it was the practice of family worship long ago. Kinghorn is a growing town with two new private housing estates and the church today must attempt to meet these present needs if there is to be a worshipping community tomorrow. Since the 18th century the church has not had a Session House and it is proposed to convert the Boswell family crypt, under the Laird's Loft to this purpose. This will greatly alleviate the congestion in the Vestry on normal Sundays as well as other occasions. Mr Harry Boswell of Balmuto Castle, the hereditary Laird, has given his blessing and approval to the scheme. Both he and his wife have contributed to the fund for the development. Others who have also contributed are United Glass Co. £250. and two anonymous members who have donated a total of £300.

Any of our readers who feel they would like to become a friend of this ancient Christian Kirk and contribute towards the funds for future development and restoration and upkeep of the fabric please send your gift to the Church Treasurer: Mr Walter Ballantyne, Manager, The Bank of Scotland, 34 High Street, Kinghorn, Fife.

The church has opened a small centre for information and a meeting place for friend and stranger at 4 High Street. It is called the 'Glory' Hole and is manned by voluntary staff from Monday to Friday during the hours of 10 am to 12 noon and 2 pm to 4 pm. It is hoped that in this centre people will find friendship, help and encouragement and perhaps a faith they have mislaid or lost.

All this is an attempt by the Church in Kinghorn to meet the needs in part of our society today and help towards the Church of Christ in the future and may Almighty God bless all these efforts.

May God grant you our friend and reader His Gracious Blessing.

Old Kinghorn. This view is taken from an old photo of 1865 and shows the sea front as it was then and probably for many years previous. It shows the Auld Kirk without a steeple or tower but the Sailors' Aisle remains intact. Where Barton Buildings stands now is the Old Mill where the Free Church commenced services in 1844. Note the shipyard buildings behind the Church and the chimney stacks showing the industrial nature of the area at that time.

"The Auld Kirk by the Sea". In 1774 the walls were taken down to window sill level and rebuilt the only exception being the Sailors' Aisle which was allowed to remain as it had been originally. In 1894 the Tower was added, vestibule and chancel extended. This view shows the New Tower dominating the scene but the chimney stacks are gone showing the decline in the industrial situation.

"GALLOWAY"

The Family of my Mother's-Mother

- Sarah Galloway Woodard -

According to family history handed down, or the way I understood:

Several years before the war between the States, about Alexander Galloway a boy sixteen (16) years of age, ran away from his home and country - "Scotland" - because he did not want to serve in the military service. On that day it was the law in Scotland that when a boy became the age of sixteen (16) he had to serve two (2) years in military training.

(Galloway 2)

He came by boat to Mobile, Alabama, and secured employment on a farm between Mobile and Grand Bay, Alabama.

He had a sister, I believe it is said that she lived in New York. I do not know if she had other children, but she had one son ^(Robert Cook) Alexander Galloway, (or Alex he was called most) sister married a man ~~who~~ named Cook. Her son's name was Robert Cook. at one time he lived in Mobile, Alabama.

(He met Robert Galloway, son of Alexander Galloway when he was brought to Mobile from Ship Island (he was a prisoner of the Yankees) during the Civil War. He gave him clean clothes & food that he might regain his strength. Robert Cook is the man who invented the tobacco evaporator.

While working near Mobile Alex Galloway was invited to go on a fishing trip down on Log River. They went to Dickersons Ferry on Log River.

(Galloway 3)

John and Sarah McLean lived there near Dickens Ferry - and Alex Galloway and his friend stayed at their home while they were there on the fishing trips.

John and Sarah McLean had a daughter named Katherine, they called her Katy. That is where Alex Galloway met Katy McLean who was later his wife.

Alex Galloway settled in Jackson County, Mississippi, near a place now called Darleton - He died in _____ and is at rest in the church yard of Rosedale Methodist Church, a few miles from _____

It is said that Alex Galloway returned to Scotland to visit his family before he married Katy McLean. His father - still angry at his son for running away - asked him:-
"well son did you see any thing over there that you liked better than Scotland?"
His son replied - "yes - a named pretty scotch girl, and I'm going back and marry her!"

Marriage of Henry Desmukes and Jane Galloway
Aug. 15, 1859
Edmund Loney, Notary

YF
Library

THE STATE OF ALABAMA,
MOBILE COUNTY.

Know all Men by these Presents, That we,

Henry J. Desmukes and Edmund Loney are held and firmly bound unto the State of Alabama, in the penal sum of Two Hundred Dollars, for the payment whereof, we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors and administrators, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents.

Sealed with our seals, and dated this 15th day of August
A. D. 1859.

The Condition of the above Obligation is such, That whereas, the above bound Henry J. Desmukes has obtained License to marry and be joined together in the Bonds of Matrimony, with Jane Galloway. Now, if there be no lawful cause why such marriage should not be celebrated, then this obligation to be void, otherwise to remain in full force and effect.

Henry J. Desmukes
Edmund Loney

THE STATE OF ALABAMA,
MOBILE COUNTY.

To any one of the State Judges, or to any Ordained Minister of the Gospel, or to any Justice of the Peace of said County—GREETING:

Know Ye, That you are hereby authorized and Licensed to join together in the bonds of Matrimony, Henry J. Desmukes with Jane Galloway, her mother having consented to the same.

Given under my hand and seal, this 15th day of August 1859

John A. Hitchcock

Judge.

Letter of consent by her mother,
Maria Galloway Bosarge (wife of Eugene Bosarge)

To the Hon. John A. Hitchcock, Judge of said Court.

The undersigned respectfully represent that she is the mother of Jane Hallaway who is now the age of fourteen years, and who resides in said County: that a marriage is contemplated between the said Jane Hallaway and one Henry J. Stronaker and she hereby consent that a license for such purpose may be issued by you Henry J. Stronaker and one Frank D. Rogers day of August A. D. 1859.
